

MODERN NORDIC

Nordic architecture emerged in the Scandinavia region. The style is clear the influence of the harsh winters in the configuration of the works. In construction, preference was given to local raw materials, especially wood. The use of this material turned out to be tradition in the region and contributed to differentiate Nordic Architecture from other styles present in Europe.

